Laurelyn Whitt's poems have appeared in various journals in Canada and the United States, including The Malahat Review, PRISM International, The Fiddlehead, Poetry Canada

Review, The Spoon River Poetry Review, Puerto Del Sol, Wisconsin Review, and Hawai'i Review.

Her most recent manuscript, Interstices, won the 2006 Holland Prize and was published by Logan House Press in May 2006. Two collections of her poetry were published in 2001.

Words For Relocation (Will Hall Press) won the 2001 Norma O. Harrison Chapbook Competition, and a long dream of difference (Frith Press) placed second in the 2000 Open Poetry Chapbook Competition. Currently she lives in the Rocky Mountains and teaches philosophy at Utah Valley University. She is however, headed north, having recently immigrated to Canada.

AN AMPHIBIAN
double-lived
intermediary
never wholly
one, and not entirely the other, it is what remains
in the space between gill
& lung, fish & reptile: a
dual-habited
evolutionary
gamble still unfolding in
the boundary
world, where
two elements
touch, alter
one another.
