

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) I-Park 2021 General Residency Program

[2/24/21]

Overview

What is the essence of the I-Park residency program; does the program have a particular vibe or focus?

The program offers a quiet, retreat-like setting conducive to exploration and experimentation. Artists are free to conceive and execute new ideas or work on existing projects. I-Park has, over the years, developed a particular interest in interpreting and engaging its natural and built environments with site-responsive, ephemeral works. As an artist-in-residence, you will have the opportunity to tap into this vein. But you will feel no pressure whatsoever to do so – and your interest, or lack thereof, in this field is not a consideration in the selection process.

Is I-Park actually a park?

In its present form, it is a fairly wild and natural, and quite beautiful, 450-acre tract of land that has a park-like feel to it – more so in recent years. Most programmatic activities take place on about 50-acres. There are presently about 25 walking trails on the land, some designed by artists and others by the I-Park creative team.

Residency Program Basics

How many artists are in residence during your sessions?

There are usually six artists, sometime seven in the popular summer sessions.

What are the time frames of the residencies being offered?

In 2021, all residency sessions are 4-weeks in duration. I-Park's primary goal is to support serious creative explorations while fostering a safe, comfortable and intimate sense of community. This is best achieved when the session participants arrive together, stay together as a group and then depart on the same date. To foster group cohesion and equity, we rarely agree to late arrivals or early departures.

What are the dates for the 2021 residency season?

Refer to the 2021 Residency Program Calendar for specific session dates.

Application Process, Eligibility, Travel Grants

What kind of application process is involved?

I-Park uses the SlideRoom third-party online submission system. All forms and work samples are submitted online. By necessity, each discipline has its own application form. Within the SlideRoom system, each discipline is considered a separate “program.” In fact, each residency session, by design, consists of a mix of artists from various disciplines. To that extent, the word “program” is somewhat misleading.

Is there an age requirement and can students apply?

Students may apply but we do not allow artists under the age of twenty-one to participate. There is no upper age limit.

Am I permitted to apply to more than one program; can I be evaluated as an artist or designer in more than one discipline?

You are permitted to apply to a maximum of 2 programs in any calendar year. You would need to submit 2 separate applications from start to finish and there would be 2 application fees. In the event you were to be accepted by the juries in both disciplines, you would only be offered a single residency. You would, of course, be given a choice as to which invitation to accept.

What is the policy on international applicants, including language skills?

We enthusiastically welcome international applicants. However, we are not well versed in the workings of the visa application process. While we are happy to provide a formal letter of invitation, and will provide whatever additional support information is requested of us, it will be your responsibility to carry the burden of the visa acquisition process through the appropriate channels. Related, it is your responsibility to keep informed with respect to Covid-19 travel restrictions as they may pertain to your ability to travel to or from I-Park. If you are planning to come from abroad for a residency, you should start working on your travel arrangements early. Accepted artists must be reasonably fluent in English.

International travel grants in 2021?

Thanks to the generosity of a group of I-Park's supporters, four $500 travel grants will be awarded in 2021. If you are a non-U.S. citizen permanently residing outside of the U.S., and have an interest in, and/or need for, a travel grant, answer the relevant questions in the (confidential) Optional Survey Form within the application software. Should you be recommended for a residency by your respective selection panel, we will review your responses within the form and communicate with you. You will be asked to submit a statement of need, two or three references and proof of your residency at that time. I-Park's three-person Grants Committee will decide which artists are most deserving of the grants. The grants will be funded upon the submission of a receipt for your travel costs. Note that your request for the grant is not visible to the selection panelists and is therefore not taken into account during the selection process.

Can two or more individuals apply to work on a collaborative project?

For the General Residency Program, we are not in a position to accommodate such arrangements. However, if both parties applying to the program are selected, you are welcome to explain your situation and request scheduling in the same session.

Are I-Park fellows (former residents) allowed to participate in subsequent residencies?

Yes, subject to certain restrictions. Fellows seeking a follow-up residency, including in the season directly subsequent to their first I-Park residency, will need to submit a new application and fee and be approved by their discipline-specific panel. Those wishing to participate in a third residency, however, must then take a break of 3 seasons before being eligible to apply again. In some instances, fellows can return sooner if recommended and approved for participation under the Invitation Program (see below). I-Park's internal guidelines state that no more than 15% of the participating artists in any season can be fellows.

If I was on the waiting list or was accepted for a residency in a prior year but was unable to attend, do I need to re-apply?

Due to the increasing number of applications for I-Park residencies, we can no longer "carry-forward" artists from the previous year's waiting list or automatically accommodate artists who declined a prior invitation. So, you will need to re-apply. However, we're happy to waive the application fee in such cases. For a fee waiver, you will need to contact the I-Park office prior to submitting your application so we can initiate the waiver through SlideRoom. Note that the fee waiver offer would only apply if you received an invitation or a waiting list letter in 2020.

Do you require letters of reference?

We do not, as a general rule, require letters of reference, though we reserve the right to do so in certain circumstances.

Within the application form, you ask for date of birth. Is that really necessary or relevant?

Date of birth information is gathered for statistical purposes and to help us determine what the ages are of the artists we're appealing to, and perhaps, those we're not attracting. We are also interested in knowing if there are certain age groups that are applying but not being accepted for some reason. In any event, jurors have been instructed NOT to consider an applicants' age when doing their scoring.

What is the policy on spouses or partners?

Spouses, partners and children cannot be accommodated at this time. However, in 2016, we hosted our first ever Experimental Family Residency which accommodated artists with children as well as their spouses/partners/caregivers. If you are on the I-Park mailing list, you will be notified if and when we host this program in the future. Check out the Family Residency brief for the 2016 program under the Special Programs tab of the I-Park website.

Selection Process

What is the general philosophy behind I-Park's selection process?

Selections are based on the strength of the artist's existing body of work, their professional career path, the panel's interest in the creative projects being proposed and, to the extent possible, a sense of the likelihood that the artist will be comfortable and productive within the particular setting that's been created at I-Park. We embrace the goals of diversity, equity and inclusion within our residency population and encourage applications from artists of all backgrounds.

What are the mechanics of your selection process?

We utilize discipline-specific panels comprised of artists and experienced professionals from the following fields: the Visual Arts, Creative Writing, Music Composition/Sound Art, Moving Image/New Media and Architecture/Landscape Design. Each panel has 3-4 fairly compensated members, one of whom is always an I-Park fellow. All applications go through a 2-step evaluation process. The first assessment of work samples, the Preview Round, entails reviewing a very limited amount of submitted content. A much more in-depth assessment happens in the Final Review Round. The Optional Survey Form cannot be accessed by the selection panelists. Beyond that, the details of our selection process (identity of jurors, artists' individual scores, comments and deliberations relating to individual applicants) are not publicly divulged. That said, we pride ourselves on having established a process that is extremely thoughtful, thorough and fair – one that assures open-minded consideration to all who have submitted a timely, complete application package. New panels are assembled each season to keep I-Park's perspectives fresh, though exceptional jurors from previous seasons are occasionally invited to serve on subsequent panels.

How important is the resume/CV?

The document is not required reading for the Preview Round. Panelists are essentially processing your work samples and possibly scanning the Project Proposal. They will, however, review educational achievements, professional credentials and public/peer recognition in the Final Round. That said, I-Park warmly welcomes self-taught artists and those working outside the academic, commercial or cultural mainstream. Selection panelists' responses to the quality of the submitted work samples is the most important factor in the decision to invite.

In terms of my chances of acceptance into the program, is there a level playing field? For example, are I-Park fellows given special consideration?

As a matter of policy, I-Park reserves the right allocate up to 15% of the available spaces to invited artists (Invitation Program), artists whose work is independently admired by, or brought to the attention of, members of I-Park's Inter-disciplinary Curatorial Panel. We're very open to, and appreciate, referrals. And, as indicated above, up to an additional 15% of the space may be awarded to returning fellows. Fellows requesting a return residency are scored alongside, and on the same basis as, new applicants. These guidelines are intended to inhibit favoritism and to keep the selection process welcoming and fair. As a practical matter, we rarely exceed a 10% annual combined total of fellows and invitees.

Any other important factors that will improve my chances of acceptance?

A reasonably coherent project proposal or, alternatively, an interesting concept for an investigation or experiment is usually well received. Also, a submission package that evidences commitment and depth of development and direction within one's practice will tend to be viewed more favorably than a broad survey or sampling of capabilities. Panelists also tend to appreciate brevity and restraint in applicants' responses to the questions posed in the application form.

What happens after the selection panels make their recommendations?

I-Park communicates with all applicants as soon as practical once the selection panels have reported their results. If you are selected for a residency, you will receive an e-mail inviting you into the program. Your final acceptance, however, is subject to your agreeing to the terms of the program, as spelled out in the I-Park Residency Agreement, and your participation in a short telephone conversation at some point prior to your session. Invited artists need to cooperate in the timely scheduling of this conversation. This informal chat takes about 20-minutes and is primarily intended to give you the opportunity to address any of your questions and concerns, to confirm that your project is feasible within the constraints of the facilities and to finalize your travel arrangements. We'll also gather some basic information from you so we can make an informed and sensitive studio assignment. Finally, we'll want to establish that basic social, including language, skills are in evidence such that we are comfortable that you can communicate and function within the intimate social setting that exists at I-Park.

When do you expect to complete your selection process?

If you haven't heard from us within 60 days of the application deadline, please go to the I-Park homepage for a status update – or contact the office.

Costs, Obligations

What expenses will I need to cover?

The use of the facility, the meals program, local transportation and staff support are at no cost to the artists. However, residents will need to pay for transportation to and from the general area and for any art tools and materials required for their projects.

Do you charge for use of the kiln?

If your project requires heavy use and you are producing for a commercial application, we charge for the estimated cost of the electricity consumed. In most cases, though, there is no charge. You must, however, have a demonstrated ability to safely operate this equipment.

Will there be any specific accountability for my work product?

As indicated above, you are free to work on what you choose. And, it is not at all unusual for an artist to change, or even scrap, their initial project proposal once they get into the groove of their residency.

Do the resident artists have any obligations other than the expenses mentioned above?

We ask that you evidence your stay – leave your mark, so to speak – by creating one or two pages of original work on paper for your residency session’s scrapbook. This could consist of a sketch or some doodles, a few photos, a narrative, musical notations – something that comes directly from your I-Park experience. These entries are typically light and loose in nature. While I-Park has been the beneficiary of many works of art over the years, and we’d be flattered if you are moved to contribute in this way, this is by no means an obligation. We do, however, request that artists be generous with their insights and suggestions for making the program and facility better. To that end, we ask that you put serious thought into the responses you provide in the end-of-session survey that we’ll ask you to fill out before you depart. We’d also appreciate, for our archives, copies of the photos you took during your residency. Finally, we hope you will help us to promote future open calls for our residency program, by word of mouth as well as other means.

Is there a written agreement associated with the residency?

Yes, there is short agreement that defines the obligations of the parties and limits the legal exposure of the I-Park Foundation, Inc. and related parties. As part of this agreement, residents agree to abide by the program’s rules and procedures as set forth in the I-Park Handbook. The completed, signed agreement must be received prior to arrival at the facility.

Lodging

What kind of living quarters are provided?

You will have a private bedroom and a shared bathroom (no more than 2 individuals per bathroom) in an historic two-story house. The house has been completely renovated and is air-conditioned. Kitchen facilities are shared by all the residents. For those sessions with 7 artists, one artist will be assigned to the “crash pad,” a one-minute walk to the house. While there is no bathroom in the “crash pad,” there is more privacy.

Will I need to bring towels and sheets? What about laundry facilities?

We will provide towels and bedding items and have a washer/dryer available for your use.

Support, Food, Amenities

What about meals?

I-Park provides a basic meals program at no cost to the artists. Breakfast and lunch ingredients are stocked in the refrigerators and pantries from which meals can be prepared by the artists at times of their choosing. Monday through Friday, our chef prepares a group meal, traditionally starting at 7:00 pm. While most artists look forward to these gatherings, attendance is voluntary. We do ask, though, that you let us know in advance if you’re not going to join in or if you’d like a doggy bag put aside. Sometimes we mix it up by ordering take-out, doing a barbeque, having a volunteer prepare the meal or organizing a potluck/participatory dinner. In some instances, though never more than once per session, outside guests/supporters may offer to host such a meal. For Saturday and Sunday, there will be ingredients available, often including leftovers, from which group or individual meals can be cobbled together. The pantries and refrigerators are stocked with staples and the kitchen is outfitted for group cooking. A meal pattern quickly develops for each session that reflects the preferences of the group. Alcoholic beverages are generally not provided by I-Park.

Cleanup, composting?

Artists are responsible for cleanup after their meals and for maintaining a reasonably neat and organized kitchen between visits by the cleaning staff: timely washing of dishes and clearing of the tables and counters, emptying the trash and, as needed, sweeping the floor – so as not to invite mice to the festivities. Housecleaning staff will visit the residence every week to 10 days. We are conscientious about composting and recycling. Due to Covid-19, we will be supplying additional cleaning supplies and disinfectants for your use.

Can/will you cater to individual dietary needs?

While we are accustomed to providing a vegetarian option on request, and though we make a reasonable effort to do so, we cannot commit to accommodating everyone's individualized dietary restrictions. Artists may bring special ingredients from home, have items shipped in and/or are welcome to accompany staff when they make their weekly run to the grocery store. Each artist is assigned a small space in the refrigerator and some shelf space in the pantry for their special, private needs. I-Park pays for the chef-prepared meals and for "common" pantry and refrigerated food items. Artists are responsible for food purchases geared to their individual preferences and/or health requirements.

What kinds of communications are available at I-Park?

Wi-fi connections are available throughout the main campus. If you have a laptop or tablet with wireless capability, you should be able to readily access our network – within the residence facility, Common Area and all studios except the Pond Studio. We have two computer workstations for common/shared use, both of which have high-speed internet connections as well as the basic Microsoft suite of programs. One of these computers is set up for Skype communications. With a recently installed tower in our neighborhood, cell phone reception is quite good throughout the property, though we cannot claim that all wireless services are available. We have a few walkie-talkies and spare cell phones if needed by artists working out on the land for extended periods of time. We also have a loud bell that we use to call people to dinner.

What kind of computer hardware, software and support will be available?

We have the above-mentioned shared computers on site; one is a PC and one is a Mac. We have a large format color printer as well as a standard format inkjet printer. Note that the computers are available to residents for casual use only as they are shared among all members of the group. If you require heavy access to a computer or printer for your work project(s) or specialized equipment or software, you should inquire of staff well in advance of your residency to determine whether or not we will be able to accommodate you. It is assumed that computer users are reasonably familiar with the current state of technology and that they will not be looking to staff for technical support or training. Residents must abide by the computer rules posted at the workstations.

Are the facilities and grounds wheelchair accessible?

Within the residence facility, the kitchen, 2 bedrooms and one bathroom are ADA compliant. The Common Area is ADA compliant as well as 3 of the 8 studios. Beyond that, we are always pleased to make facility and other adjustments for artists with special needs beyond wheelchair accessibility. Please make us aware in advance of your residency if you will be requiring any special accommodations.

Transportation

Can I drive my vehicle to I-Park?

Absolutely, we have ample free parking. Trucks, vans, motorcycles and trailers are parked out back.

How about getting around onsite, given the scale of the property?

We generally have at least 2 bicycles available – and we have an all-terrain vehicle onsite that can be used to move people and materials around as needed. Artists are not allowed to operate the all-terrain vehicle.

What public transportation resources are available if driving to I-Park is not an option?

The closest airport is Bradley International, sometimes called Hartford/Springfield, which is about a one-hour drive from East Haddam. The T. F. Green airport in Warwick, Rhode Island is another option. Most international artists coming by way of a New York area airport, including Newark, will typically travel by train from New York City (Metro North or Amtrak) to either Old Saybrook (much preferred) or New Haven, Connecticut. There are bus stations in Middletown, Hartford and Old Saybrook, each of which is about 30 minutes from I-Park. There are detailed directions on our website and in the pre-residency Orientation Packet for getting to I-Park from the major international airports. However, flying directly to Bradley International, whenever practical, will save you several hours of transit time. Feel free to reach out to staff if you would like assistance in finalizing your travel arrangements.

How do I get to I-Park from the airport, train or bus station and how do I get around when there?

I-Park will be pleased to pick you up at an airport or train or bus stations that service the local area (i.e., Connecticut). Pickups and drop-offs are subject to 7-day advance scheduling and are based on making these runs at the beginning and end of the scheduled residency session – during normal work hours (9:00 am – 5:00 pm). We do attempt to “pool” our pickups so there could be some waiting involved. Note that we are not staffed to do out-of-state pickups. In the case of international arrivals, coordination can be tricky. We have a strict protocol for such travel arrangements. Artists are issued a set of written instructions that they must follow carefully to assure that things go smoothly. As for getting around the local area once you’ve arrived, we go grocery shopping at least once a week and are happy to take you along. Special arrangements can be made for unusual purchasing needs with advance notice. We can help you source local transportation options (rental cars, Uber, taxis, limousines, private drivers, an affordable local van service) if you have more intense or personalized transportation needs. Except in the case of an emergency, should you have occasion to leave I-Park before the official end of your residency, you would be responsible for your own transportation costs.

Nature, the Land

How does one get familiar with the site?

A group site walk of the land is scheduled for the first few days of the residency. While this is voluntary, most artists choose to participate. It is a good opportunity to get familiar with the basic trail system, site features as well as the general character of the natural environment. We will also provide you with a site and trail map that can be used for self-exploration. You may also wish to go to A Sense of Place (under the About tab) on the website to see how artists in various disciplines have, over the years, interacted with and interpreted the site. Most every session, some folks from a local chapter of the Audubon Society lead a site walk focusing on birds and indigenous plant and animal species.

Is it possible to create installations on the land?

Yes, subject to project approval. The main considerations are site location, safety, feasibility and intensity of the intervention (all installations are considered temporary). A written proposal and sketch will be required in advance and the artist may be responsible for removing the piece at the end of their residency. In certain cases, installations may remain up for a longer time frame and I-Park will either maintain or dispose of them at their discretion – or, per the terms of a separate Site Installations Agreement. Certainly, those working in the field of site-responsive art encouraged to engage the landscape and will find here a rich natural canvas for their creations.

Does I-Park provide support for such installations?

I-Park is accustomed to providing limited staff and equipment support for site installations. A modest budget may be available for materials. If you have a particularly ambitious project in mind, it may be useful to discuss it with staff prior to your residency.

Is it alright to use onsite found materials in my work product?

Yes, there is quite a variety of natural and man-made materials, including wood from the Woodstock Shed and lots of interesting objects from our infamous Junk Trail – that you’re welcome to utilize. Please just ask permission first as there may be a few caveats or exceptions.

What is the weather like at I-Park? What kind of clothing should I pack?

New England is known for the unpredictability of its weather. We recommend packing long pants, tall socks and some long sleeve shirts, regardless of the season, to reduce tick exposure. Sturdy hiking shoes or boots are also recommended. The mean temperatures for this area, as well as the average lows and highs, are as follows (as measured in degrees Fahrenheit):

Apr.	46 (34 – 58)	July	71 (58 – 82)	Oct.	50 (36 – 64)
May	57 (44 – 68)	Aug.	68 (56 – 81)	Nov.	41 (30 – 51)
June	65 (52 – 77)	Sept.	61 (48 – 74)

Are there any insect problems that I should be aware of?

Ours is an area, like much of the Northeast, where ticks are prevalent. You are advised to educate yourself on the precautions you can and should take to minimize the risk of contracting Lyme and related diseases. We discuss this topic at length during the group orientation session, we offer insect repellent and we do some preventative spraying along the main pathways. In addition to ticks, we also tend to get a wave of un-lady-like “ladybugs” in the spring and early fall (harmless but somewhat annoying). Other than that, the insects are pretty civilized and unobtrusive, though, to city dwellers, their evening cacophonies may take some getting used to.

Are there wild animals in the area that I might want to know about?

You will regularly come upon deer and wild turkeys. We have frogs, squirrels, chipmunks, raccoons, possums, rabbits, snakes, turtles, skunks, woodchucks, beavers, muskrats and otters. The variety of birds on site is quite impressive. Learn more by signing up for the Audubon walk. In transit, wild geese will stop and pay us an extended visit each year to birth, raise and flight-train their young. There are also foxes, the occasion bobcat and coyotes – and we understand that fisher cats and black bears are making inroads into the area.

Studios, Equipment

What kind of studio facilities are provided?

Basic, private, well-lit, multi-purpose workspaces in two converted barn structures and in a series of free-standing cabins. In 2017, we built two relatively large visual artists studios, though one of them is temporarily serving as a composer’s studio. All studios are heated, air-conditioned and have ample natural light, though none have bathrooms. We use a monthly checklist to assure that all studios have the basic amenities at the beginning of each session (copy available). I-Park will attempt to accommodate specialized equipment needs, within reason, especially if this equipment is likely to have future utility. However, such requests should be made well in advance of the residency. Some customization of the workspaces may also be possible with advance discussion. Studio photos and specifications are available on the website.

Are the studios set deep in the woods?

Except for the Pond Studio, no, they are actually in fairly close proximity to the residence facility. The Pond Studio is about a ten-minute walk from the house. The new visual arts studios are nestled into a wooded area a 3-4 minute walk from the house.

What about “workshop” space?

I-Park has a workshop with tools and equipment that is available to all artists, primarily for working with wood and metals. If you are unfamiliar with any of the tools or equipment you would like to use, please ask staff for assistance. If more than one artist per session is in need of this space, a sharing or scheduling arrangement will be negotiated. We also can erect temporary canopies so that spaces out on the land or outside assigned studios can be used as workshops.

Can I request a specific studio or room in the house?

Studios, and bedrooms in the house, are assigned by staff based on their best judgment, taking into consideration many factors. We try to match the specific personal working practices and functional needs of the artists with the particular characteristics of the various available spaces. We also need to be flexible in the face of changing circumstances (we often do not make final studio assignments until a day or two prior to the start of the session). So, while you can request a specific studio or bedroom, and we will consider it, we cannot make any firm commitments in advance of the residency – and staff decisions on studio and living space assignments are final.

Does I-Park have studio spaces outfitted with equipment for photography and/or computer-generated/new media art?

In some cases, we have been able to assist with specialized equipment and/or software. But these days, most artists bring their own gear. Nonetheless, I-Park has successfully hosted many artists working in these fields. Inquire as to your specific needs and we will attempt to accommodate. With adequate advance notice, we can create black-out spaces for filmmakers and photographers in certain of the studios.

What kind of storage space is available for my “stuff?”

The studios are of reasonable size and your specific requirements will be discussed in advance during the pre-residency phone conversation. The living quarters have a fair amount of closet space for clothing but not a huge space. We suggest you pack light.

Orientation, Rules, Policies

What kind of orientation do you provide?

If you peruse the I-Park website and this FAQ, you will become quite familiar with the basics of the program. The pre-residency phone call provides you the opportunity to ask more detailed questions and you are, of course, welcome to contact the office at any time. We schedule a sit-down orientation gathering involving all the artists and staff during the first full day of the residency. The I-Park Handbook in your room and the Orientation Notebooks in the library offer even more information about where things are and how they work. We go to great lengths to minimize unpleasant surprises.

What is the policy on smoking and vaping?

No smoking and vaping are not allowed in the residence facility, studios or common/shared spaces. Smoking and vaping on the grounds is permitted with due consideration for your non-smoking fellow residents as well as fire safety. Please discard all associated waste products properly.

If I happen to live close by, is it a problem if I return home occasionally?

We view the grant of an I-Park residency as a precious gift. Those who live close by may, quite naturally, be tempted to go home on occasion, or even on some kind of routine schedule, to attend to . . . whatever. This makes for a less than fully engaged residency experience and, as we have learned, it has an impact on the group dynamic. We frown on this and, except in extraordinary circumstances, we're not inclined to offer residencies to those unable to fully utilize the program as intended. An I-Park residency involves a serious commitment on the part of all parties.

Can I invite a guest?

We can accommodate guests on an occasional, case-by-case basis, but frankly, we discourage it, especially during the work week. We usually have a full house and a guest has the potential to upset the group dynamic, particularly if the nature of the guest relationship is purely social. Permission needs to be requested before the guest is invited. We inform the group in advance whenever guests are scheduled to be onsite so there will be no surprises. In any event, guests are never allowed to enter the residence facility or to stay overnight, in the residence facility or elsewhere. The best time to have a guest visit would be for the Open Studios event at the end of the residency. Artists are responsible for the proper behavior of their guests. Out of regard for the privacy and security of our artists-in-residence, unauthorized individuals appearing on the grounds without prior permission will be escorted off the site.

Are there any specific acts or attitudes that would generate a termination of the residency?

I-Park does not condone alcohol or drug abuse, the sale or trafficking in illegal substances, habitual non-participation, the possession of lethal weapons, prolonged absences without prior notification or the breaking of any federal, state or municipal laws or regulations. In particular, we have a zero tolerance policy with respect to causing risk of injury to others, sexual harassment, environmental contamination, entering another artist's bedroom or studio without permission, disturbing another artist's work product and stealing.

Can I bring my pet?

Sorry, no pets are allowed.

Social Aspect, Diversions, Surrounding Area

Are there any social or public events planned?

Artists are encouraged to participate in Open Studios, a community event usually scheduled for the final Sunday afternoon of the residency session – and Artists' Exchange, an intimate sharing amongst the artists (and occasionally a few guests) of their existing bodies of work and, perhaps, aspirations for their residencies – generally a quiet evening affair scheduled for early in the session. The following are also typically woven into the session calendar: arrival buffet, welcome dinner, pot luck supper, a bonfire out by the pond and bon voyage dinner. We are also open to consideration of a mid-session field trip if there is group interest. The key is to strike a sensible balance between the work schedules and ambitions of the residents – and their desire for social interaction and exposure to local cultural happenings. All social events are entirely optional.

Are there any recreational facilities on site? Is there a place to work out or go hiking or biking?

We have extensive walking trails on the property and we're adjacent to a well-maintained state park with miles of marked trails. We have some free weights and yoga mats available. There are no recreational facilities as such on site, though we have a pond you're welcome to fish in, a few swings and there are several bikes you're welcome to use around the facility.

Are there any other diversions available?

The Common Area, really the artists' living room, is a gathering place for coffee, conversation, relaxation. Here, you'll find a TV monitor, a DVD player and a stereo system. We have a stock of movies (decent) and CD's (not so good – plan to bring your own). We have a modest library of art and nature books and a variety of arts-related periodicals. Of course, we have some board games, cards and such.

How remote is I-Park from commercial amenities, civilization?

We're a 15-20 minute drive to most types of retail shopping, and even further from decent art supply stores. Therefore, shopping trips need to be planned more carefully than would be the case in a typical suburb or city. We are, however, fairly close to a well-stocked hardware store/lumberyard. Our Orientation Notebooks are constantly being updated with information to help you locate the types of items and services you may require. You should, however, try to bring with you, or have shipped in advance, any odd-ball art supplies or specialty tools you might need.

What's available in the local area for entertainment?

We're in the sticks, so to speak, so keep your expectations low. For major excitement, options might include driving to a local bar that has a pool table, the ice cream shop, a bowling alley, the Goodspeed Opera House (traditional but very nice), one of the organic food markets, the historical society, a cute little library or a trek to one of the nearby casinos. We're about 30 minutes from the ocean (Long Island Sound) where there are public beaches. We maintain a good listing of cultural events and venues in Connecticut so that those interested can avail themselves of such, either individually or as a group.

Discipline-Specific Commentary

Does the I-Park residency support performance artists, including musicians, actors, dancers?

We do not claim to do so. However, some performance artists are accepted into the program by way of the Moving Image/New Media discipline. If you submit a well-crafted video of your performance work, and if high quality documentation is a part of your practice – AND if you have the ability to work solo during your residency (we do not permit overnight collaborating teams in the General Residency Program) – then you may wish to avail yourself of this devious strategy.

For architects and landscape/garden/ecological designers and landscape architects, what kinds of expectations do you have in terms of the types of projects that would/could be undertaken during an I-Park residency – and what types of projects might be of interest to the selection panel? You're not expecting actual built projects or works on the land, are you?

There are absolutely no expectations that you will create a work that will benefit I-Park in any way. If you'd like some suggestions for how you might productively and gratifyingly utilize the grant of an I-Park residency, go to this link: Landscape/Garden/Ecological Design, Architecture Residencies.

Miscellaneous

Can I ship materials in advance of my arrival and then ship them back at the end of the residency?

Sure, but it's a good idea to let us know your intentions in advance so we can be on the lookout for your packages and put them in a safe spot for you. Be sure to send your package(s) to our street address (Your name c/o I-Park Foundation, Inc., 428 Hopyard Road, East Haddam, CT 06423) and not to our post office box. Note: at the end of your residency, you are responsible for the shipment of any articles back home (packaging/crating, coordinating with the shipper, including payment arrangements, etc.). Please don't leave items behind for us to send back for you.

Are you open to the public? Can I come up and check the place out?

I-Park is not open to the general public. We strive to maintain a somewhat sheltered environment (enclave, cocoon) for our artists-in-residence and to minimize distractions and disruptions. Please make prior arrangements with staff if you'd like to visit the facility. Or come to one of our Open Studios, Open Trails or other public events. In either case, we'll be happy to show you around.

Do you have any advice for an artist who has never participated in a residency program before?

In our invitations and announcements, we refer to "self-directed" residencies. You need to be prepared to set your own goals and organize your daily routine accordingly to achieve those goals. I-Park imposes very little organizational structure – you're basically on your own in terms of making effective use of your time. Not everyone has the discipline or motivation to deal with this freedom successfully. The other aspect of life at I-Park that has been problematic for a few of our residents has been the issue of solitude and quiet. We stress to all concerned the importance of respecting the privacy of our resident artists, especially in their personal living and working spaces. This tends to foster an emphasis on work over social interaction, at least during the workday. Furthermore, the general area itself is extremely quiet and, on moonless nights, very, very . . . dark. Although solitude and the ability to control one's own time are highly valued by most of those who come to I-Park, this environment is not for everyone. Some individuals require a more broadly and predictably supportive social structure, external sources of direction and perhaps even, in some cases, a bit of commotion. Though you may very well find these kinds of stimulation at I-Park, you should not expect them.

What if I am scheduled for a residency and have to cancel?

You should not accept an I-Park residency if the prospects for your attendance are at all in question. Check that your personal, financial, professional and visa-related affairs are reasonably in order before you commit. If an unexpected emergency arises that makes attendance impossible, please let us know immediately so we may attempt to schedule someone from our waiting list. Be aware that any notification of cancellation fewer than 60-days prior to your scheduled arrival date will create a severe hardship for I-Park.

Do you have staff members living on site?

The simple answer is no. From Monday through Friday, except for certain holidays, we have staff onsite throughout the day. However, on the weekend, you're on your own. That said, a staff member and an independent contractor lives within a 10-minute drive from I-Park and are accessible if a problem arises. We also have a 24-hour emergency phone call system in case things go bump in the night.

May I post about my residency on social media?

You are most welcome to post about your studio, your work, your discoveries and your experiences in nature. However, please be sensitive to the privacy concerns of your fellow artists. As a courtesy, before posting any images of your cohorts or any staff members, please check with them first. Our Instagram account is @iparkCT and you can use the hashtag #IParkCT if you'd like.

Is there a story behind the I-Park name?

Yes, but we've long since forgotten it.
